

The Stars Say—

For Tuesday, April 13

The lunar aspects for this day may be said to accelerate activity in business and in private interests, with much stirring in new channels of endeavor and in connection with social, cultural, domestic or affectional relations. But while definite headway and some gratifications may be expected, there will be decided opposition from elders or other tenacious obstacles with which to cope. This may best be done by patience, prudence, perseverance and tact.

A child born on this day may be practical and constructive in substantial and commonplace ways, as well as in art, music, drama or other creative forms of expression. It may be studious, systematic and painstaking.

FOR "HONORS" COACH

The feud between N. Y. U. and City College of New York is hot. Recently Howard Cann, cage coach at N. Y. U., was presented a letter, signed to a suit of long underwear, by the C. C. N. Y. boys who had defeated his team.

Daily Pattern for Home Use

By ANNE ADAMS

SLIM, GRACEFUL, ALL-DAY DRESS

The simpler your frock, the slimmer your figure—every smart matron knows that! Anne Adams gaily carries out this rule in Pattern 4380—one of the youngest styles for mature women you've ever seen. It's made in flowing, smooth pieces with soft, softening touches. Those gathers at the bustline are both attractive and give needed ease. Hip-seams curve to make the sides of the bodice fit nicely and to gently flare the skirt below. Do let the neck and the sleeves be gently scalloped, and you might try the sides of the bodice and the sleeves in contrast. A dawn-to-dark dress that takes a jiffy with the Sewing Instructor.

Pattern 4380 is available in women's sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50. Size 36 takes 4 1/2 yards 50 inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly SIZE, NAME, ADDRESS AND STYLE NUMBER.

Select your warm weather wardrobe from our new ANNE ADAMS SUMMER PATTERN BOOK! Flattering sport clothes for sun and surf—romantic evening gowns—a costume for the June bride—the correct thing for travel wear—colours for informal and dress occasions and "pocket edition" styles for children—all the fashion ingredients for a successful Summer designed for you by Anne Adams. Order your copy today. The book is fifteen cents but when ordered with a pattern, which is also fifteen cents, THE TWO TOGETHER ARE TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

U.S. WHEAT REACTS TO WAR IN NORTH

Grain Gains, Then Slips Following Nazi Invasion.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, April 15—Sudden spread of Europe's war into Scandinavia jolted the grain market momentarily but it was apparent in trade circles that it had neither changed the world wheat situation nor increased the prospect of early revival of European demand for American breadstuffs and feeds.

Domestic grain prices shot up at the inception of the new German thrust but afterward lost much of the advance.

The United States has been sending small quantities of grains, including rye, corn, oats, wheat and soy beans, into Scandinavia in recent months. The prospect was that this limited traffic may cease as a result of new war developments.

Scandinavia is not an exporter of grain. Thus, the new war front will have no effect in increasing demand for grain in Great Britain, export interests here said, except that possible reduction of the Scandinavian shipping fleet might further contract available ocean tonnage and force importers to buy at sources from which supplies can be secured quickly and economically.

On the other hand, Scandinavian meat and dairy products, coming principally from Denmark, have been absorbed in large quantities in the British market. With this source of supply cut off, the British may be required to turn to North America particularly for pork, trade interests said.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Appeals to Miss Carman's Patriotism to Accomplish Her Mission.

AS I HEARD Miss Carman's approach, I felt my spirits sliding rapidly toward the nadir and anxiety. Miss Annie Carman was not a person whom one could easily deceive. If I made flimsy excuses for not coming to see her after my rescue of her cat, pretended that today's call was in fulfillment of my promise to her, and then introduced the subject of the ancient map of our house, which I hope might be in her possession, she would be justified in thinking I was merely trying to make use of her, and would be capable of dismissing me jellly, albeit courteously, with my mission a failure.

I had but one possible play, I told myself. I must stake everything upon it, and swiftly I sent Lillian the signal which, between us, means "Hold everything! Leave this to me!"

"Will She Help?" "Dear Miss Carman," I said earnestly, "won't you please believe me that I have wanted to come to see you long before this? But circumstances have kept me away. Indeed, my visit today could not have been made except for a belief in your discretion and your patriotism, on which I am counting for the solving of a most difficult problem."

I could see the muscles of her body tense as she lifted her head and looked at me appraisingly. I knew what that gaze meant. She was questioning the sincerity of my statement, wondering if I were attempting to make a convenience of her.

For a long second that seemed endless, that appraising gaze lingered on my face, while I felt the success of my father's errand trembling in the balance. Then her eyes softened, and she gestured toward the big bay window where stood a daintily equipped tea table with chairs drawn near it.

The Build-up

"Suppose we sit down while you tell me about it," she said quietly, and I knew that while success was not yet assured me, it would not be denied without a hearing. I knew something else also, or else my training in observation of many years had been in vain. Miss Annie Carman had a secret love for the melodramatic. I meant to take advantage of that in the next few minutes.

"Thank you," I said, and as she took her seat behind the tea table, Lillian and I took the chairs she indicated. I did not speak for fully a second, devoting any histrionic power I might possess to giving the impression that something of tremendous moment was troubling me. When the old woman's eyes rounded with excitement I began to speak, slowly, impressively.

"Before I tell you anything," I said, "I must ask you if anyone is within hearing."

Her head went up, and her eyes were suddenly alert.

"Made His Doubt" "No one now," she said. "In a few minutes Maria will come in with the tea, but she will knock first, and the doors are heavy. She can hear nothing from the hall if you speak in moderately low tones. And—my hearing is excellent. I can hear you, no matter how low your voice is pitched."

"Then," I said, slowly, "I will now tell you what is troubling me. First, however—" I hesitated—"you may not be able to grant the request I am about to make of you, but—"

She interrupted me promptly. "I will save you the trouble of finishing that sentence," she said, smiling faintly. "May I assure you now that whether or not I can grant your request, whatever you say in this room is inviolate. I shall never repeat it to anyone."

"I knew that," I said, smiling back at her, for I never should have come to you. And I did not intend to ask you for a specific promise."

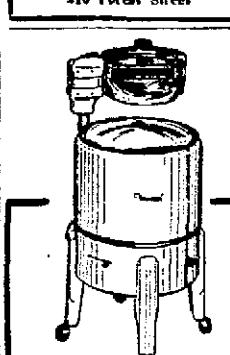

"That was the reason I gave you one," she retorted whimsically, and then Maria's knock sounded upon the door, and Miss Carman threw up a tiny admonitory hand.

"Won't it be possible to wait until after our tea for our discussion?" she asked.

"Economic Laws—Not Advertising—Determine Prices..."

"I am amazed that so many people who are able and learned should fall into fallacies of reasoning so frequently. Many economists have said that advertising has resulted in greater distribution of products, has helped to increase the quality of goods, and has lowered costs to consumers. Some who have admitted this have also said, or intimated, that advertising performs no justifiable economic function, and that it actually increases the cost of goods... Now these two statements are logically contradictory. The truth of one excludes the other. Both of them cannot be true. What is the truth about this matter? ... In our system of business any product will inevitably gravitate to approximately its natural selling price—to what people are willing to pay for it. If the quality is not satisfactory, people will not buy at the price. If the price is too high, people will not buy either. The cost of advertising, therefore, cannot have any profound or lasting effect on selling prices to consumers. Competition, Supply and Demand, and Mrs. John Public's judgment and pocketbook determine finally the selling prices of goods. The cost of advertising, therefore, cannot increase prices; it is only permitted—by the Laws of Economics—to lower prices."

"Oh, I don't need that again," she said. "It's my money he went on unhappily. That and his being so jealous of Elaine. He thinks if she marries me well always be off on trips and she'll have no time to help him at the farm. As a matter of fact," he went on wistfully, "I'd like darn well to help on the farm myself. It's as much as my life's worth to poke at a rosebush in my garden. I think it would be fun to dig around and plant things. If Ab would ever let me tell him—"
 "I'll tell him, Brenda promised. And then because this nice man was still seemed in the depths of depression and she felt her new responsibilities as a resident of The Street, she added, "I believe Elaine cares more for you than she knows herself. If you'll let me give you a piece of advice, Mr. Barrow—"
 "Oh for Pete's sake call me Ned," he said explosively.
 All right then Ned if you'll let me advise you this is what you must do go away from here now without leaving any message for him. Don't call her tomorrow. Be out if she calls you keep her in for half a couple of weeks, said Brenda coldbloodedly and let her see how she'd miss you. I've really been out of her life in the meantime. I'll work on Ab. She held out her hand. Is it a bargain?
A Good Boy
 He replied doubtful. I suppose you know best. Anyone who'd dumples like yours must have had a lot of experience. I mean—well you do know I don't mean to be offensive don't you. I just mean you aren't like Miss Ormrod or

 "My dear Brenda, he loudly thought to a person in sight. "So you too are at advantage of the late after-noonness to get a breath of And then in a whisper, "How things go?" I saw young B drive off."
 They went beautifully—day Judge is there any recollection to the boy—asked the "Ac that Ab doesn't like I mean?"
 "None at all," the Judge proudly then remembered and sank his voice in a conspiratorial undertone. "None at all. A good boy—in spite of his mother and his no! Abs objection stands in the way. Poor!" He fixed Ab if it were only that it's Elaine herself. She does love Ned and by George I'll Ned to have the best! No going to marry him out of it! Tell you that.
 Brenda chuckled. The Judge was glaring at her as wrath as if she had been egging the male Abemithy war toward after-noon's eloquence. He remembered this plea for a little in the day and what as she realized how much of real state of mind he was betraying. Then the dimples appeared and she said sweetly.
 "I agree with you But I'll you a secret, Judge Harper really think Elaine cares more about Ned Barrow. And I'm going to experiment a and see.

"What did you say to that misguided child?"

"That she needed a wave and a manicure," Brenda replied sweetly. "That though usually I don't believe in facials for the young I think in her case she would be benefited by one. Her skin is really in bad shape she went on confidentially. She tells me she has been working a lot out on the farm and of course that is very hard on one's complexion."

Miss Ormood rose dispiritedly in every line of her angular figure.

"I see you are determined to keep me in the dark about this matter. Very well! I shall go to Elaine herself. I bid you both good afternoon!"

What will Elaine do? Brenda asked when the caller had dashed out of the front door. I suppose wasn't very polite to her, but—

It's good for her to be beaten at her own game once in a while. Adelaide declared sturdily.

Elaine? Well she has her own method with Miss Ormond. It isn't quite as straightforward as yours but it's about as effective. I declare if it weren't for you two girls I don't know how anybody on the Street would get along with Miss Ormond.

Elaine's method? Brenda prompted.

Oh she cries! Simply relieves into her handkerchief—Ah declares she keeps a specially large size for these occasions—and answers all questions with a sob. It maddens poor Miss Ormond. Ah says if Elaine keeps it up long

FHA LAND PLANNING INCREASES SHARPLY

Expanded 260 Per Cent - 1939, Reports Show.

One of the federal housing agencies land planning divisions has announced that the number of subdivisions planned and plotted through cooperation with its land planning division, Mr. McDonald pointed out.

17 special land-planning conferences for subdividers, developers, architects, and engineers. In addition, 86 conferences were held with city officials in regard to re-preparation of city plans and zoning ordinances.

As a result of the FHA's land planning program, in many cities more than 50 per cent of the FHA's mortgage-insurance business is located in neighborhoods planned and plotted through cooperation with its land planning division. Mr. McDonald pointed out.

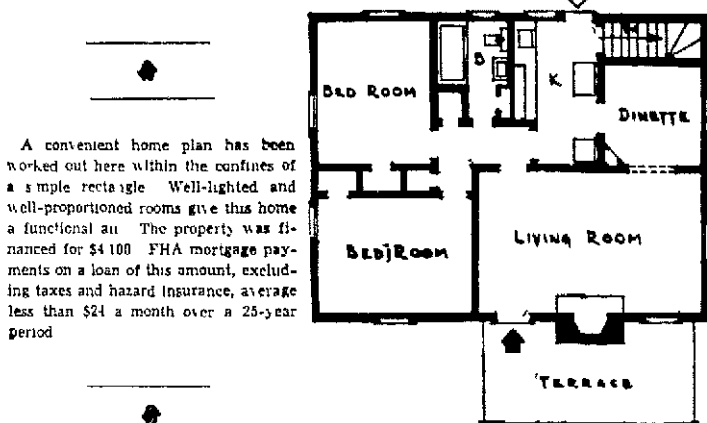

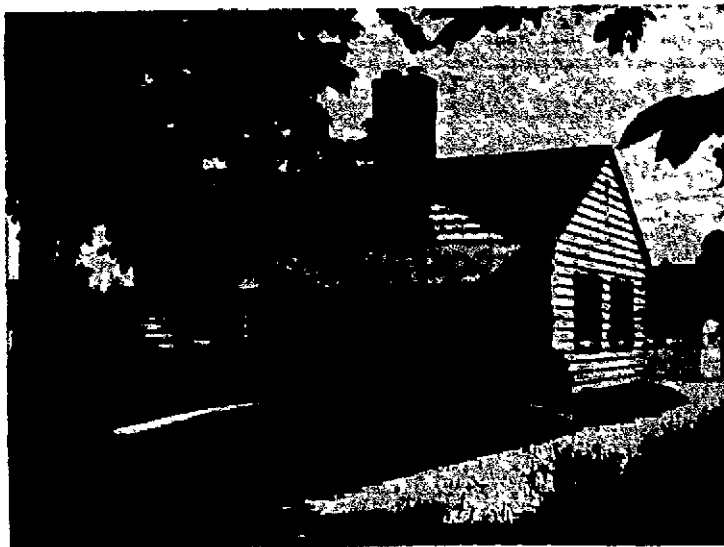

The FHA's experience has clearly demonstrated that protected, planned neighborhoods are more desirable for home owners, afford better security for investors and are more profitable to developers, he said. Much of the division's work is concerned with the salvaging and rehabilitation of residential areas. Approximately 60 per cent of the subdivisions for which neighborhood development plans were set up by the planning division covered old tracts already laid out and, in many cases, partly sold.

The division bases its activities on flexible standards which can be adjusted to local requirements of climate, topography, and market. Land planning offices are maintained by the FHA in nine key cities throughout the United States where the services of experienced land planning consultants are available for the review and analysis of proposed residential developments.

NOISELESS SCREEN DOORS

A spring or check on screen doors will close them automatically without noise. The sound of the closing can be deadened by tacking small pieces of felt or rubber to the main door frame at three points of contact. Various kinds of hinges and springs are kept in stock by hardware dealers.

Compact Plan for Low Cost House

FLOOR PLAN

A convenient home plan has been worked out here within the confines of a simple rectangle. Well-lighted and well-proportioned rooms give this home a functional air. The property was financed for $4,100. FHA mortgage payments on a loan of this amount, excluding taxes and hazard insurance, average less than $24 a month over a 25-year period.

Answers for Home Owners

Q How should bathrooms be arranged in relation to other plumbing for economy in installation?

A In a two-story house the most economical installation is effected when bathrooms are located about each other or above other plumbing fixtures so as to permit the use of a common soil stack. When two or more bathrooms are located on the same floor, they should be adjacent to each other in order of construction the bathroom and kitchen should be closely related in location. Place water closets near the soil stack and the wastes of other fixtures in close proximity to the stack to minimize horizontal pipe runs. In addition to an economical plumbing layout convenience in the location of the bathrooms and fixtures is also important. A well-studied plan should and usually will make both possible.

Q What is meant by a metallic paint?

A Metallic paints are composed of aluminum bronze, or other metallic flakes in a vehicle of varnish or oil. These paints are often used as a prime coat on wood to seal the pores against moisture penetration, or as protective coatings on metals or concrete. These paints should not be used on a concrete wall until the wall is thoroughly dry, since any moisture that might remain in the wall will cause the paint to peel.

Q Are wooden gutters practical for collecting roof water?

A Wooden gutters are satisfactory providing they are built of a durable decay-resisting wood and the trough is properly protected by two coats of pitch or three coats of lead and oil. Instead of painting it is good practice to line the gutters with sheet metal. This lining should start under the last shingle at the edge of the roof and be carried down into across the bottom of, and over the top outside edge of the gutter. Without these protections roof water is apt to find its way into the exterior-wall construction.

Q Can tile floors be laid over wood floor construction? If so, how should it be done?

A As a base for the tile mortar bed, wood-sheathing boards should be cut in between the floor joists, set flush with the top of the joists and supported on wooden strips nailed to the sides of the joists. Cover the sheathing boards with water-resisting paper and set the tiles on a bed of portland-cement mortar 1 1/2 inches thick. The mortar bed should be reinforced with either galvanized metal lath or wire mesh embedded in the mortar.

This construction permits the bathroom floor to be flush with the wood floor in adjacent rooms.

Survey Lists Progress Shown Last Year by Savings, Loan Associations

Four points emphasizing the "remarkable progress of federal savings and loan associations in 1939 were listed by Corwin A. Fergus, director of research and statistics of the federal home loan bank board in a special survey of 1,310 associations just completed. These points were:

1. Savings held in the associations increased 24.2 per cent in the 12 months. This makes more money available to their communities for home loans. Institutions were also able to reduce outstanding investments of government agencies in their shares by 8 per cent.

2. Mortgage-loan balances rose 10 per cent. This is considered an exceptional increase because the repayments on all outstanding home loans are subtracted from the total of new loans made during the year to give this balance.

3. Undivided profits and general reserves expanded 12.6 per cent making the institutions stronger than ever.

4. Real estate owned such as foreclosed properties was reduced 14.3 per cent. This is another mark of success because it frees more resources for new loans.

PRIVACY FOR PORCHES

At this time of year much thought is given to methods of screening porches and terraces from public view. The planting of a row of tall annual-blooming plants is one way of accomplishing this. If the screen effect is to be permanent, the planting may be of shrubbery forming a hedge. For a more decorative method, trellis of lattice work with blooming vines growing over it may be used.

Heating Plants Demand Checking at End of Season

The heating plant should be included in the spring house-cleaning program.

The moisture in basements which results from April showers may cause damage to soil-lined heating surfaces. Soot especially when moist has a corrosive tendency.

The annual spring cleaning of the plant coming at the end of the heating season, should include a thorough cleaning of the firebox and flues, cleaning and removal of the smokepipe, greasing the edges of all doors, checking the oiling of all draft controls and cleaning and flushing out of the oil tank. This process may eliminate the necessity for costly repairs next fall.

SAG-PROOF EDGES. The Beautyrest has patented edges that don't break down. You get "mild-attress" comfort close to the edges of the bed. Compare it with other mattresses. Test its comfort for yourself.

LASTS LONGER. In a test by the United States Testing Company, Hoboken, N. J., different mattresses were mowed night and day by a 200-lb. roller. The Beautyrest lasted three times longer than any other mattress tested.

And plant a kiss upon your brow.

For the smiles you always gave me Are lingering with me now.

The old rolling chair is empty— The place where you sat so long; You've exchanged for a seat in glory.

Up there with the heavenly throng.

I could not wish you back, Mother, In this world of pain and woe; For I know that God knew best When He said it was time to go.

Your life was a life of service— So patient, humble, and kind; Your thought was always of others.

And self was left behind.

I know you had your heartaches, Your burdens, toil, and pain; But it mattered not how heavy the load.

You kept smiling just the same.

Sometimes my load seemed heavy And I felt myself giving down, But your smile made me think of heaven.

And some day a beautiful crown, Then I'd try to pick up courage,— Be cheerful, faithful, and brave And do what I could for you.

Mother, In return for the smiles you gave.

So I'll do my best, dear Mother, As I travel life's journey through.

Not to be selfish and grouchy, But just keep smiling like you. I'll try to lighten the burdens Of those less fortunate than I And try to point them to Jesus And a home beyond the sky.

Some day, Mother, I hope to meet you.

In that beautiful home above Where there'll be no pain or sorrow.

But all will be peace and love. Then I'll place my arms about you And on your brow plant a kiss; Your crown I shall lift to do it.

But that will be wonderful bliss. Then we'll talk of His wondrous glory.

As we walk the streets of gold, And behold the beauties of heaven With its sights and wonders unfold.

We'll shout God's praises forever, And with the angels sing, And be forever happy With our Savior, Lord and King.

J. E. Edler and Family.

People Are Learning the Facts About Funerals

Not so long ago there was a complete lack of available information about funeral service.

Today it is different. Before investing sums that may run well into three figures, most people want to know that they will receive value in service and merchandise for their money.

DEMOCRATIC RIVALS ENLIVEN CAMPAIGN

Calls on Nye to Quit Army General Race.

By The Associated Press
COLUMBUS, O., April 15.—Two crowded races for nomination for state senator next month are being fought to enliven Ohio's political scene.

Edward Lamb, Toledo, called on for George D. Nye of Cleveland to withdraw from the race.

Citing recent election of alleged voters in Pike county, Lamb said that rank and file Democrats "resent the fact that they are being carried up by your campaign."

Lamb's ally, "too dignified with committee support of 26 prominent Democrats, including three former judges, was Nye's opponent."

Non-Partisan League of political action, in which two Democratic candidates for the U. S. senate, and three party aspirants for state offices, including Lamb, but declined to accept gubernatorial candidacy. Republicans won support.

minutes at 10:55. The last one was Don Sanson at noon. He was also late in coming back, with Harold Cobb first at about 12:30. The air distance is 40 miles while on the road it's about 55. The planes cruised at anywhere from 75 to 110 miles an hour.

I knew it was cold for April, and dressed accordingly with a suit, vest and trousers, a wool sweater over the vest and a corduroy jacket over the sweater, then some extra trousers.

"Not enough," said Cobb, hauling out a pair of galoshes, some heavy mittens, a thick leather coat, helmet and goggles and a scarf.

Personally, I thought it was too much, but when I was about half way to Findlay, I quite agreed with Mr. Cobb. The cold blast of air from the propeller cut through the clothes, which was no wonder with the blades roaring around 3,000 times a minute.

Grindell and myself were in the only open cockpit plane in the group. The others were in closed jobs, some with heaters. Cobb said he got so warm he had to turn his heater off.

The wind was fairly stiff, some estimating it as high as 18 miles an hour from the northwest—almost a direct headwind going up. It blew our plane about five miles off the course and we had to turn due west to hit Findlay.

Incidentally, navigating a light plane is a trick, since it is so subject to the whims of the wind. The good pilot flies by map and compass, although some have been known to stoop to following railroad tracks and highways. At least a railroad always leads somewhere.

BERLIN

broken between King Haakon and the German ministry to Norway, Kurt Brauer.

Germany does not consider herself at war with Norway, but still considers herself Norway's protector against British invasion.

Some responsible quarters dwelled on foreign rumors about Europe and on rumors that Italy soon would join Germany actively, possibly by seizing Greece and "protecting" her against the western powers.

The course of the northern struggle between British and German air and sea forces is obscure from this vantage point.

Indications of cautious official disclosures are that the fight is still on, with each side taking heavy blows but unable or hesitant to try for the knockout punch.

Germans insist that there has been no head-on clash of the grand fleets but rather that the week of war linked with Scandinavia has been chiefly a series of comparatively minor engagements between segments of the naval forces.

The separate actions, added together, present the spectacle of a huge battle—a sort of positional warfare at sea—so vast that no one commander can direct its many phases, scattered over hundreds of miles.

Report Damage to Fleet

Yesterday's communiqué spoke of several British destroyers damaged and "in some instances destroyed" and said the British destroyer Cossack was hit, fired and forced aground.

It also said that a British cruiser of the Glasgow class had been torpedoed north of the Shetland islands and three allied submarines destroyed by pursuit planes in the Skagerrak.

The communiqué presented but a sketchy picture of land operations. German defensive works were said to have been strengthened and extended in Norway at Trondheim, Bergen, Stavanger and Kristiansund, while German troops in the Oslo region fanned out to the north, east and west, occupying Sarpsborg, Asker and other unidentified towns.

Troop Landing Indicates Britain Gains in Norway

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

The sensational word of the landing of British expeditionary forces at several points on Norwegian soil means that the allied success in the battle for Norway has increased and that they control the situation at this juncture.

These landings represent coordination with the almost unbelievable feat of the English in breaking through the dangerous, narrow waters of the Kattegat from the North Sea into the Baltic Sea and mining it clear from Kiel to Lithuania.

The allied efforts to oust the Germans from Norway will progress in such degree as the Anglo-French are able to sever Nazi communications with the north.

Mine Laying Important

The mine-laying, while lacking the spectacular aspects of conflict attendant upon landing of troops in the face of enemy resistance, likely transcends in importance the landings themselves.

Indeed, it seems to me from the facts at hand that it may prove to be one of the key-developments of the entire war.

This estimate must be qualified by the proviso that, pending further details, the mine-field is really the substantial affair which the British announcement indicates, and not merely a few mines strewn over an area of 100,000 square miles.

If you please will glance at your maps for a moment you will see the significance of this is that the Anglo-French brotherhood couldn't carry out a major move of this sort without having at least temporarily secured control of both seas which wash Germany's northern coast.

This means that if the allies are able to maintain the position of control they will have severed the Reich entirely from all direct communication with Scandinavia.

LONDON

one German transport was set alight at Bergen.

A British naval squadron, led by the Battleship Warspite, on Saturday sank seven German destroyers at Narvik, northern Norwegian port.

Disclosure that troops had reached Norway raised the veil on how Britain intended to fulfill her pledge to the embattled Norwegians that "help is coming."

It also explained the ferocity of Britain's raids on Germany's footholds in Norway, especially at Narvik and Stavanger.

Not only were the British striking at Germany's sea lines of communication with her expeditionary army, it appeared, but also were covering transports bearing her own troops and supplies to Norway.

Where the British landed or in what number was not divulged by the war office and admiralty, but it was believed in London that Narvik and Stavanger were logical jumping-off points for the British.

Norwegian advisers reaching Stockholm said a British landing force had gone ashore at Narvik under the protective fire of warships commanding the city's outlet, Rombake fjord.

Say German Withdrawn

They said the Germans had withdrawn into the interior and were caught between the British in Narvik and Norwegian forces, now fully mobilized in that area.

Britain previously had given no confirmation to reports that her forces were on the way to battle the Germans.

Both sides, meanwhile, reported new successes in the air-bombing fighting.

Britain declared two German transports were sunk and that four torpedo boats had been sunk on a transport convoy attacked in the Skagerrak.

GREEN MAKES BITTER ATTACK ON C. I. O. LEADER

Declares Lewis Hopes To Become Dictator In U. S.

By The Associated Press
FLINT, Mich., April 15.—A stinging denunciation of John L. Lewis as a man harboring dreams of becoming dictator in the United States rang in the ears of General Motors today as they prepared for Wednesday's bargaining election.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, leveled the charge against the head of the rival Congress of Industrial Organization in a speech to workers here yesterday.

"I charge," Green said, "that the leader of the C. I. O. today is secretly planning a political revolution comparable to that which made Stalin the dictator of Soviet Russia, a political push comparable to that which made Hitler the dictator of Germany."

"I charge that this man, suffering from delusions of grandeur, is secretly desirous of becoming the dictator of the United States of America."

A week ago Lewis, in an address here, exhorted the workers to "make it unanimous" for the C. I. O. in the forthcoming election. Green spoke to an audience estimated at 4,000, Lewis to an estimated 10,000.

REPORT SUB ATTACK OFF AMERICAN SHORE

British Ship Radios Call 800 Miles from New York.

By The Associated Press
NEW YORK, April 15.—A submarine attack on the British freighter Graig approximately 800 miles northeast of New York was indicated today in two fragmentary wireless messages.

The first message, picked up by Mackay radio here at 4:33 a. m., said:

"SSS—SSS, 4041 N. 37.14 W. Graig. Sub coming close."

An hour and fifteen minutes later Mackay said the Canadian government station at Campden-down, N. S., reported receiving a second call from the Graig, a 3,683-ton vessel.

This gave an "SOS" distress call which the Canadian station interpreted as "indicating attack but no further details."

The position given would have placed the vessel, registered from Cardiff, Wales, and owned by the Graig Shipping Company of London, about 300 miles southeast of Halifax, N. S.

(Naval authorities in Halifax said no SOS had been received there from the S. S. Graig. Naval sources added, however, that they were "taking all necessary action.")

WAGE-HOUR AMENDMENTS FACE DEBATE IN HOUSE

Revelation of Measure Up For Consideration

By The Associated Press
WASHINGTON, April 15.—The controversial Logan-Walter bill to standardize procedure of federal agencies claimed house attention today, starting a busy week which will be climaxed with debate over wage-hour amendments.

The Logan-Walter bill would authorize review by the courts of decisions of the government's 100 administrative agencies and would make uniform their regulations and orders.

The fight over its enactment centers on opponents' charges that the legislation would impair the efficiency of some quasi-judicial divisions.

The senate is devoting the week to secondary legislation, but house consideration into this week of three sets of proposed changes in the wage-hour law will be a prelude to a major battle over revising the Wagner labor act.

In general, the amendments would exempt "white collar" workers earning at least $100 or $200 a month from the law's standards, which at present call for a maximum work week of 42 hours and a minimum wage of 30 cents an hour. Telegraph messengers and workers in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands also would be excluded.

AKRON CLAMPS LID ON CITY'S GAMBLING

By The Associated Press
AKRON, O., April 15.—Vice squadmen clamped the tightest lid in years on the city's gambling racket in what Vice Chief William Hoenigswald described as a move to legalize "harmless" gambling.

"We're going to put the lid on so tight that people who want a little harmless gambling will put pressure on their representatives to change the law. There's no reason why the state couldn't legalize bingo, punchboards and small lotteries to produce revenue for the state and for the cities," Hoenigswald said.

Private clubs sold no liquor yesterday. Slot machines were turned out to the wall or moved out. Dice boards and punchboards vanished. Bingo in beer parlors and fraternal organizations had come to a halt. All bookie joints were closed.
